1550 KENT

Dining table of natural stone
Design Wolfgang C.R. Mezger 2023

KENT is an exciting new way to experience a table. The partly asymmetrical tabletops create new seating arrangements and thus open up new perspectives for the guests sitting at the table. The fascinating thing about the KENT idea is that it first creates exciting asymmetrical shapes and then to find a harmonious balance through carefully considered arrangements. The stone finishes almost appear more elegant due to the asymmetry of the tabletops and convey an impressive aesthetic experience thanks to their veining and color. The table concept opens, beyond from the banal routine of symmetry, towards new inspiring and communicative situations.

In combination with the base - consisting of two half-shells made of cast aluminum - each shape of the tabletop has an overall sculptural appearance that makes the KENT look very light and delicate.
